

Rob Trebilcock is the Senior manager, Public affairs for Cox communications. In his current role he takes pride in partnering with local organizations to help them fulfill their mission while at the same time aligning Cox's external strategy with their nonprofit partners. Rob manages a portfolio of partners making an impact in the areas of youth, technology, and education with diversity and inclusion always as an overarching theme.

Rob's also worked in the nonprofit sector and held a position at the executive level. In the last 15 years his focus has mainly been on Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). With experience in working across multiple states and internationally Rob's really enjoyed working with diverse populations.

Proud father of two, Rob enjoys, golfing, staying active, traveling, live music and giving back to his community. He currently serves as past Board president of the Nebraska Sports Council and also serves as a board member for Non-Profit Association of the Midlands, Urban League of Nebraska and Jet Foundation. Rob is also proud alumni of Leadership Omaha.